Next stop: Melbourne, on lap of luxury

THERE is no shortage of Melbourne punters keen to live the high life 'on the cheap'.

Luxury lifestyle club Limited Edition has had so many inquiries about its Sydney club from south of the border that this will definitely be its next stop.

"Once we have the Sydney club up and running well we will be looking to set up in Melbourne — probably around June or July next year," revealed managing director Shane van den Barselaar.

He said interest in the Sydney Club had been strong and those willing to pay $18,000 a year to be members had been a varied bunch.

"I have been surprised by the variety — there are quite a few tradesmen who own their own businesses and a lot of professional people in their 20s and 30s.

"Then there are some retired people who have some time on their hands and want to live life to the full.

"I think it will be a really great mix of people."

Shane said a lot of the Melbourne interest centred around luxury cars but he was keen not to let it simply become a car club.

Members get to use a range of super-luxury cars, boats and holiday homes for up to 45 days a year without owning them.
